Revised April 2016

Standards of Learning for Virginia
History and Social Science
United States History: 1865 to the Present

Students will continue to use skills for historical and geographical analysis as they examine American history since 1865. The standards for this course relate to the history of the United States from the Reconstruction Era to the present. Students should continue to develop and build upon the fundamental concepts and skills in civics, economics, and geography within the context of United States history. Students will use investigation as a foundation to delve into the political, economic, and social challenges facing the nation once reunited after Civil War. This foundation provides a pathway to develop an understanding of how the American experience shaped the world’s political and economic landscapes.

The study of history must emphasize the historical thinking skills required for geographic analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship. Students will apply these skills as they extend their understanding of the essential knowledge defined by all of the standards for history and social science.

GEOGRAPHY

USII.2 The student will use maps, globes, photographs, pictures or tables for

- a) explaining how physical features and climate influenced the movement of people westward;
- b) explaining relationships among natural resources, transportation, and industrial development after 1865; and
- c) locating the 50 states and the cities most significant to the development of the United States and explaining what makes those cities significant.
